April 3, 2006

London – Reuters (LSE: RTR; NASDAQ: RTRSY) Enterprise Division has scooped three leading awards from Inside Market Data magazine for outstanding performance in the financial content sector in 2005.

The awards include, data management vendor of the year (services and solutions) for DataScope, product development of the year for Reuters Data Feed Direct (RDFD) and contract win of the year for the UBS deal for Reuters Wireless Deliver System (RWDS).

As a company Reuters won three other awards from IMD this year including executive of the year for Tom Glocer for the second year running, news provider of the year and research provider of the year.

Of the Enterprise division awards, Reuters DataScope is a total solution for historical and reference data needs, offering comprehensive and accurate equities, fixed income, money markets and futures data. The Reuters Data Feed Direct (RDFD) is an ultra low latency feed handler which delivers data directly from exchanges to either applications or the low latency Reuters Market Data System. Reuters Wireless Delivery System (RWDS) allows financial professionals to receive Reuters market data and news, plus third party and internal content, on handheld BlackBerry devices.

The award nominations are drawn up by Inside Market Data based on coverage in the newsletter during the previous year before being voted on by readers.

Peter Moss, Global Head of Enterprise Solutions, said: "I am delighted that Reuters Enterprise Division has received this outstanding recognition from Inside Market Data and its readers. The three awards reflect the deep seated commitment in Reuters to not only meet, but also anticipate, our customer's needs,"

Adrian Goulbourn, publisher, Inside Market Data, said: "Inside Market Data's readers continue to recognize Reuters strengths in multiple areas and this year rewarded the company with six IMD Awards. This year over 1,900 people voted across 16 categories, which makes the IMD Awards the most accurate reflection of how the industry views participants in the market data community. Congratulations to Reuters on its achievement."
