Recent changes limit interest deduction for multinational companies operating in Brazil

NEW YORK, May 10, 2010 /PRNewswire via COMTEX/ --Thomson Reuters, through its Tax & Accounting business and WorldTrade Executive brand, has recently published the Fifth Edition of its corporate report, Brazil Tax, Law and Business Briefing to assist practitioners with the new thin capital rules and other aspects of doing business in Brazil.

The rule limits the interest that may be deductible by multinationals and raises questions surrounding grandfathering debt and impact on net equity.

Brazil Tax, Law and Business Briefing provides guidance on tax and legal issues investors should consider when evaluating potential acquisitions, creating a business, or entering into a joint venture or strategic alliance in Brazil. Content and guidance is provided by experts at major accounting and law firms in the region, and topics covered include:

- How to deal with tax audits and tax litigation
- New Accounting Rules for Brazilian companies
- Real estate acquisition in Brazil
- Tax considerations in planning an acquisition
- Tax planning opportunities available in Brazil
- Planning opportunities using treaties
- Transfer pricing in Brazil
- Developments in M&A transactions
- The Sao Paulo Exchange: Opportunity for Financing
- Infrastructure investments for the Rio Olympics 2016

Thomson Reuters also publishes the authoritative Latin American Law and Business Report, Practical Latin American Tax Strategies and Venture Equity Latin America. More Information on Brazil Tax, Law and Business Briefing is available at <http://www.wtexec.com/bratlb.htm>.
